THE SILL BENEATH THE DOOR.

There is a strange, a mystle spall,
Of memory and love,
That chains my heart to other days,
Where'er I rest or rote.
I walk across call floor,
I go the passage through and stand
With farwell words and staff in hand,
Upon the sill
That has beneath the door.

Each spot around that dear old home. Its well-kept treasure gives; In every true and wall, and clair, Some cherished memory lives, But nowhere be its my beart aso high, And nowhere feel I more. Than here, when musingly I stand, with farewell words and staff in hand, Upon the sill.

That hes beneath the door. What silent years have flod since I

Looked out from dear old home,
Mith hopoful heart through morstening eye,
For better days to come!
Twee here I urroad to those I left,
With home here recovery. With longing heart once more— Here longing heart once more— Here longied still, where now I stand With brewell words and staff in hand, Upon the sill That lies beneath the door.

Pre passed o'ar other thresholds since, for grander bails—but still I never entered home like this, Across another still Parents and home we have but once, When some they come no more. Of which smooth words and staff in hand, Unon the sill Upon the sill That has beneath the door.

First Rate Liquor.

Joe was fond of good liquor, or, indeed; iquor of any kind; and being generally short of funds and credit, too, was in the habit of seizing on all remnants of liquor left by practitioners at the bar.

Thus matters progressed for some ten years, keeping Joe pretty well soaked, when Mr. K-, having occasion to make a mixture for curing a diseased beef, had need of some nitric acid or aquafortis, that article being one of the ingredients of the lo-

He had no sooner passed the door than in came Joe, and seeing, as he thought, a tumbler, as usual, with some liquor too good to be wasted, immediately looked through the bottom "as was the usual custom," and quickly-threw himself outside of said liquor. He then went to his woodchopping, smacking his lips at the unusual strength of the spirits. Shortly after, Mr. K. coming in, picked up the tumbler to go his medical preparation, but was very much surprised on finding it empty .luquiring of the traveler, he was informed that a short, chunky man (describing Joe) had drank it. Railfoad Accident—Thrilling Scene and Wonderful Escape.

Wo have already briefly mentioned that at one o'clock on Thursday morning last an scoldent happened to a passenger train on the Pittsburg; Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad beyond Enou, by which several passengers were injured, but fortunately none killed. The widow of the late Senator Linn. of Mo, and daughter, Judge Delafield, of Memphis, and a dozen others, who were in the sleeping car, were thrown down an enibankment of 30 feet, the car turning over several times, once over a stake and rider fence. It took fire and burned up. A passenger furnishes the Pittsburg Chronicle with the following account of the acci-

After stating that the accident was occasioned by a broken rail, and that the locomotive and baggage car passed over safely, he says: "The passenger car first meets the obstruction, and is thrown off the track .-With its load of human life, it is hurled over and over down a steep embankment of John Musselman. an adjacent fence. Its inmates scramble out the fallen stoves set it on fire, and abandoned to its fate, it is a heacon-light to what follows. It's flames throw over the ice and snow a lurid glare. That car is consumed; and the fence itself is on flames; but in God's Providence, not a single life was lost, and, save with a few bruises only, the passengers escaped uninjured. The sleeping car, last on the train, was, by a severe wrench, severed from the passenger car. Carried on with terrible velocity, struck the sleepers on which the track laid. It wavered a moment or two, and suddenly leaning over, its impulses carried it forward onward and onward, and over the precipice. Down the precipice it turned leap after leap it took; crash after crash came broken glass, falling like rain, among its occupants, until jumping over the fence, the car stopped with all its inmates, sixty feet from the fence, within a field. Crash was only succeeded by terror. "Help!" was cried, but who was there to help? Those who had escaped the burning car short distance in front, had gone on to the shelter of the baggage car, still on the track, with a very few exceptions. One of themnot to be invidious-was Mr. George George, of Cincinnati. He, and some others not Picture to your mind's eye that sleeping

The cry of fire was raised, and followed by the most terrible confusion, in the midst of which a lady was heard to cry, "Help!" my mother will be burned ! The car was now filled with smoke, while all around was so dark that nothing whatever could be distinguished. The passengers knew not where they were, or the extent of their danger. At length the door was found, and a general rush for the open air was made. Some few, however, remained behind, and assisted in rescuing the lady before referred to, and her noble and courageous daughter, from their perilous posi-

I need only add that the injured lady, first spoken of, was the respected widow of Senator Linn, of Missouri, and that noble hearted girl, her daughter, Mary L.

Sandwich Island Accident.

[From the Boston Journal, January 6th.] ·We are indebted to a friend for a copy of the Sandwich Island Advertiser of November 3d, by which we learn that the bridge over the Wailuka river at Hilo, gave way on the 21st of October, just as a party of Americans were crossing on horse-

It appears that the party had been on picnic excursion; and were returning to the town in the latter part of the afternoon. It consisted of Hon. S. L. Austin and Mrs. Austin; three sons and a daughter of Rev. D. B. Lyman ; R. H. Dana, Jr., Esq., of Boston, Captain Henry Burdett, of the Boston ship Raduga, with Mrs. Burdett, Captain Brown, of the barque Belle, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Gulich (sister of Mrs. Austin,) Miss Pratt, sister of Mrs. Charles Brewer, Mrs. 'Rines,' Mrs. Ashley, Captain Blackmer, and J. II. Coney, Esq., Sheriff of Hilo. As a portion of the party were crossing the bridge the report of the snapping of a chain was heard, then a crash, and the bridge from fourteen to eighteen feet above the water. There was immediately a scene in the water of struggling men, women and horses.' Mrs. Austin was pulled out of the water, but her horse was drowned. Capt. MALONE, N. Y., Jan. 7 .- Henry Meachham, of the town of Dickinson, shot his wife last evening, in presence of her father and mother. They fled alarmed to the neighbors, and on returning found Mrs. Meacham dead, being shot, and with her throat cut. Her husband lay dead by her side, having shot himself through the head, Domestic trouble and jealousy were the cause of the act.

Split in the Kansas Legislature. LEAVENWORTH, K. T., Jan. 10.

The Territorial Legislature of Kansas passed a joint resolution, adjourning to Lecompton, which Governor Medary vetoed. The Legislature passed it over the veto by a two-thirds vote of a quorum. A question having arisen as to the constitutionality of the vote, the majority adjourned to Lawrence, while the minority remained at Lecompton. Both factions claim to be the legal body, and it is apprehended that another series of legislative difficulties will be created by this disagreement.

Jerry, a slave, belonging to Col. Francis McCormick, of Clarke county, Va. was tried in that county last week, by five nugistrates, on a charge of plotting and conspiring with slaves to rebel and make insurrection. He was found guilty, and sentenced to be executed on Friday, the 17th day of February. A slave proven to have uttered insurrectionary sentiments was sentenced to be sold out of the State. It seems that the negro was tempered with by man happening to pass along where Jerry ind another slave were at work, drawing ion out to make confessions which probaily he never thought of before, and then nforming on him. ## Oysters in Baltimore,

The trade in esculent bivalves in the Monumental City, is counted by millions of bushels, and it appears that it gives employment to thousands of persons. Oysters are exceedingly unobtrusive in their habits, and show no disposition to push themselves into the society of their zoological superiors; but their modesty does not prevent a recognition of their merits, and an appreciation of their good qualities brings them from their obscurity, and causes them to perform an important part in the business of some scaport towns, as is manifest from the following statistics, which we get from the Baltimore Sun :

The oyster trade of Baltimore during the

There are now employed in the trade three huntime in attending the funeral of his broth- dred vessels, which, during the eight months er, and $2 for railroad fare in going and through which the season lasts, are constantly plying between the oyster beds of the Chesapeake and its tributaries, and this city. These vessels give employment to 1000 men as officers and crews, besides unwards of 1000 constantly employed at the grounds in getting up the oysters for market. In the city, employment is farmished to 1400 shockers, 100 curters, 150 tinners, and about 200 clerks and laborers, beside

> Of the immense quantity brought to this market, by far the largest portion is shipped to the West, as far as Nebraska and all intermediate points. The entire trade will reach to upwards of $1,800,000. During the season it frequently happens that fifty tons per day are shipped by the railroads for those portions of the Union, the geographical positions of which have placed this great luxury far from them, and which cannot be had, except from the inexhaustible beds of the Chesapeake Bay. This has become an important branch of trade, and one which is of substantial value, and all the supplies of those employed in it are drawn lirectly from the city, thus keeping in circulation a large amount of money for the purpose of ordinary trade.

What Shall be Done with the Boys? They are growing rapidly, some of them have already the deep voice of their hastening manhood; a decision as to their future calling should soon be made. This is too serious a matter to leave to mere chance -Too many boys have been put to a particular trade or business merely because when old enough to do something for themselves, a vacancy occurred in that business, and nothing else offering at the time, the place was taken. Too often they have been like stones thrown into a wall without being fitted to a place; they have rested uneasily, "volled" frequently, and gathered very little " PHILIPS " Rather let the boy's disposition be studied, see for what he is best adapted, and let that be his calling.

But tew have deliberately chosen to make farmers of their boys, especially if they showed, or were supposed to show more than average talent. Nor can this be wondered at. So long as farming was chiefly mere manual labor, however favorable it might be, it could never take rank with those professions that called out the powers of the mind, and there is consequently a surplus engaged in professional call ngs.

Agriculture is now taking rank as a science. Improved implements take off the ourden of labor, and brains are doing what nawn finmerly accomplished. There need therefore be no hesitation in choosing farming as a vocation for boys, and in educating them to this end. The time is hastening, when educated, thinking farmers alone can expect great success, and those who are wise will prepare their sons accordingly, if it be decided that this shall be their business.

The boy's own choice should have some weight in selecting a calling, but it is unwise to be governed by that alone. The fancies and whims of youth are too unsafe for a matter involving much of the prosperity of after life. A wise parent will so uspire his son with a love for what is hought best for him, that he will enter upon it from choice. Let this matter be duly considered. It may well be abject for thought and discussion during the long evenings of the season.

Throwing Stones at the Devil.

A late reverend divine, well known for is quaint wit, as well as for his kindness of risburg. Philadelphia, and the North and heart, walking out back of his house where t new street was opening, saw an Irishman hard at work with a crowbar, striving to dislodge a huge stone from the ground where it was held fast by the roots of a tree. Pat's patience was fairly exhausted by the vain struggles he had made, and at last he exclaimed in a great passion.

"The divil take it! the divil take it!" The old pastor approached him, quietly emarking that he ought not to make such free use of the name of the Evil One, and certainly not to throw such a big stone at him as that. Pat was quiet in a minute, and striking his crowbar into the ground. and leaning leisurely on it, he turned up his face at once to the pastor and the sunlight. and while over it roguishly playing those indescribable forerunners of true Irish wit, he replied: "Och, then, an' it's verself that's findin' fault wid me for sayin' that same. Troth it's yees an' the like o' yees, that's paid by the year for abusin' the ould gintlemin all

To-Day, If Ye Will, Hear His Voice.

Daily and hourly doth our Maker's voice speak to us. He calleth through the wants newly married couple from Virginia. There, earth's abundance, and through the varied the result, but I pitied the poor mother who is a depth of affection in it which is quite experience of life. The wild complainings never increased in strength, frequency or pet bag in hand, taking it afoot, came along of the wintry wind, the hoarse murmuring quantity. If they were stimulants, and the public square in Lexington, Scott country of the crested waves, the clashing of the maked tree branches, are all cloquent of the uniformity, they would, in time, become dropped dead to all appearances. The voice that we refuse to hear, spoke through the shadowless days of infancy, plead with, and strove to win us when youth sat lightly on our forcheads, and bade us listen to the rushing tide of Time; it left us not when mature age brought its responsibilities, nor doth it cease to expostulate, encourage, comfort, till death sets its | bus result ; yet, we ought not to forego their home ; am out of money, I. live in Cleve-a seal upon the throbbing, rejoicing, sorrow-

To-day, in prosperity, in health, in joy, if ve will hear His voice! for to-morrow He may speak in other tones, and if they are strange as well as sad, we shall hear them less willingly than now. It calls to the prompt enjoyment and improvement of each passing hour, to the purification of motive, to self-consecration, to a more confiding faith in the promises whose fulfillment lies beyond the bound of Time.

Never unto two beings has life brought the same experience. The same event carries to different hearts lessons diametrically opposite, so marked is human individuality. One meets the gathered storm as a Christian hero, breasting its fury with a determination that bears down all obstacles, bending, it may be, only to rise renewed when the trial is past; another finds himself wrecked in heart and hope, prostrated without the resolution to retrieve his losses. and sinks, broken-hearted, to a nameless grave. #### How English Duchesses and Countesses Employ their Time.

The following extract from a recent letter of an English traveler, who has had the best opportunities for observation, may surprise some of our fine ladies :

I can assure you that, having lived all my life about in the different castles and 'manor houses of Great Britain, and been censtomed to the industrious habits of the Duchesses and Countesses, I was utterly astonished at the idleness of American fine adies. No English woman of rank (with the exception of a few parvenues), from the Queen downwards, would remain unemplayed for one half-hour, or sit in a rocking chair, unless seriously ill. They almost all (with hardly an exception) copy the letters of business of their husbands, fathers or brothers; attend minutely to the wants of the poor around them, and even take part in their amusements and sympathize with their sorrows; visit and superintend the schools; work in their own gardens; see to their household concerns;think of their visitors; look over the weekly recounts, not only of domestic expenses, out often those of the farm and the estate; manage penny clubs in conjunction with the working classes, to help them keep themselves; and with all these occupations. by early hours, they keep up their acquaintance with the literature and politics of the day, and cultivate the accomplishments

The following article contains matter worthy of consideration. There can be no doubt that there are more fast men amongst the friends of the administration than in sult. They are still making "hard-shell" any other party, and it is most probable that it is mainly from them that the generous Sergeant-at-Arms expects gratitude for Buch favors :

A large majority of the members of Congress are dependent, it is said, upon their receipts from the National Treasury to pay their current expenses. The law provides that they shall be paid nothing from the Tressury on account of their services as members of the House, until after they shall have organized. Nevertheless, says the Washington Star, individuals among them first days of last week, according to programhave already been paid; or had advanced to them; by the Sergeant-at-Arms of the last Congress, an aggregate probably of hundreds of thousands of dollars, borrowed by that functionary, it is said, from the York Conntv (Pa.) Bank. We have heard of a draft of Mr. Sickles, (whose seat is contested, it will be remembered,) upon him, for some $2,000. As a matter of course, when they may organize, in paying such members as have placed themselves under such obligations to him, he will deduct his advances so

County Bank charges him interest for the money advanced for this purpose, and that he charges no interest to the members .-Therefore, what he pays as interest is neither more nor less than so much money paid by him, cash in hand, to secure his reelection, to be the Sergeant-at-Arms of the body, which, since the fashion of raising numerous Investigating Committees, and *Bouring the country far and wide for wit road. nessess came in vogue, is understood to haive become one of the most lucrative offices under the Government. So long as there may be biennial dead-locks in the consumpecuniary obligations to the last incumbent of the office, the position may be regarded as a sort of life-place, ordinary competition _ for it being out of the question.

Dinner to Hon. Bailie Peyton.

On the evening of the 14th a complimentary dinner was given by the citizens of Philadelphia, to the flon, Barran Pay-TON, formerly an illustrious citizen of Tennessee, and, in its palmy days, among the most influential members of the old Whig party. He was aid to Gen. Taylor during ister to Chili. He has been a resident of California, but has now returned to his native State. He accepted the invitation to the public dinner tendered him by the Philadelphians, and it came off, as we mentioned above, on the evening of the 14th. A large number of distinguished guests were present on the occasion, among whom we notice the venerable Crittenden, of Kentucky; Gilmer, of N. C.; Maynard and Nelson, of Tenn.; Courad. of Lou.; Dunn, of Ind.; Verree, Campbell, Blair, Covode, and Fuller, of Pa.; &c. &c.

Nelson, &c., whilst the President, Morton McMichael, Esq., as he always does, added ; zest to the "feast of reason and the flow of undoing this work of bad men devolved of soul."

Old Virginia held her position tirmly, pluming herself upon the doctrines of 1798. If the party should put into their platform a resolution for the Pacific Railroad, Virginia would veto Mr. Buckanan. Of course, it didn't go in; but California must be secured.—What did they do? They attached California to the platform as a sort of cow-eatelier, except that they put it behind. (Roars of laughter and applause).

He introduced Mr. Douglas' name, who, ed to be ruled off the track. He said:

"It is a hard case; for Mr. Douglas was the gentleman whom they selected as the instrument to disturb those great pacific measures of 1850. He worked for them faithfully; he went as far as he couldhe went to the very line; in fact. I think he overworked himself; and I think yet if he had been a little more quiet-not quite so eager-his chance would have been better.

He reminds me of the captain of a flatboat, called the Sleeping Beauty, who descended the Ohio and Mississippi rivers from Kentucky. [1 draw upon Kentucky for all my heroes. He had floated upon the sluggish current of those streams for six long weeks, and, becoming impatient, he pulled into what is called a "shute," or cut-off, by which he saved an immense distance, and placed the Sleeping Beauty ahead of a whole fleet of boats he had been following. After this he became erazy for shutes, and finally, arriving in sight of Bayou Plaquemine, he called all hands to the oars, and cried: "hard down, boys; jerk her in I' and sure enough he entered that bayon, which never returns to the Mississippi, passed over the bar, and the Sleeping Beauty woke-up, and went careering down the rapid and crooked bayou, snapping her oars, and at length glided out into a broad bay in the Attakapas.
